States' Pledges at the ICC Review Conference NGO actions needed to uphold commitments

The first Review Conference of the Rome Statute (RS) took place in Kampala, Uganda, from 31 March to 11 June 2010. This landmark conference provided an opportunity for states and NGOs to reflect on the spirit of the Rome Statute and its impact to date on the emerging system of international criminal justice.

States and civil society engaged in various discussions, including a general debate, negotiations on different amendments to the RS, and a stocktaking exercise. The Coalition for the International Criminal Court (CICC), along with the ASP, international organizations, and international nongovernmental organizations, encouraged states to seize the momentum of the Review Conference to demonstrate their commitment to the global fight against impunity through concrete pledges on the different issues crucial to the functioning of the Court: universality, cooperation, complementarity, peace and justice, and the impact of the RS on victims and affected communities.

By the end of the Conference 36 states made 106 pledges. See below for the list of pledges organized by region. We consider it a positive development that 36 states made pledges and would like to encourage more to do so. At this time, we believe the best approach is to constructively engage with the governments with a view toward collaboratively moving forward with the pledges' implementation. If your state did not make a pledge, please encourage officials to come to the next Assembly of States Parties meeting (in December 2010 in New York) with a concrete pledge.

You are in the best position to know what actions would be appropriate in your national context, but actions could include:

- Meeting with the foreign ministry of your country and other relevant government entities, such as Committees on International Humanitarian Law (IHL), to follow up on their plans to fulfill their pledge, offering your organization's expertise where relevant
- Writing a letter to your head of state and government officials to thank them for their pledges and to encourage them to implement the commitments
- Informing the media of the government's pledge as a way to raise awareness and create pressure on the government to fulfill its pledge

The implementation of these pledges will help to further consolidate the global fight against impunity, and to ensure a positive impact on the system of international criminal justice.

Please let us know of any actions you take in this regard at:
